Description:

From Publishers Weekly New York City news anchor Eliza Blake, now back at the morning TV show KEY to America, pays a price for her high media profile in this riveting novel of suspense from bestseller Clark (When Day Breaks). When kidnappers seize Eliza's seven-year-old daughter, Janie, and Eliza's Hispanic housekeeper on their way home from camp in New Jersey, Eliza's comfortable life turns into a living nightmare. The FBI, local law enforcement and Eliza's news team work around the clock to discover the identities and locations of the kidnappers. When a psychic arrives at Eliza's doorstep, claiming to know details of the kidnapping that weren't released to the press, Eliza is convinced that the psychic can help find Janie. Suspicious letters, ransom notes and mysterious clues heighten the suspense. A multitude of red herrings will keep the reader guessing to the shocking conclusion. (Aug.)

From KEY News anchor Eliza Blake is back hosting the morning show, and she couldn't be happier, since working mornings means more time with her eight-year-old daughter, Janie. But when Janie and the nanny fail to come home from camp one day, Eliza's worst fear—that her very public persona has put her family at risk—is realized. Could the kidnapper be an obsessed fan? In Clark's trademark fashion, suspects and red herrings proliferate, and all the while the guilty party is within arm's reach. Supporting roles by Eliza's boyfriend, Mack, and her KEY News co-workers help make this an entertaining entry in a pleasant if formulaic series. --Mary Frances Wilkens --This text refers to the edition.
